Last updated: November 26, 2025

Welcome!

The privacy policy explains how we store, share, and protect your personal information that we collect about you. Keep in mind that we...

- Care a lot about your personal information
- Have the minimum amount of information about you
- Give you full control of your information

Information we collect about you

We do not collect any information about you until you log in into the website. Before you log we can only collect these information about you: the room name and your username in ticktacktoe game (you can delete it and we do not store them), the clicks in the cookie clicker. After logging in we store your username (Discord or GitHub) in our databases. If you decided to create a API key then the key contains identification about you (your username) but you can delete it any time. We do not store information about when you used out API endpoints.

How we protect your information

When it comes to protecting your information we take it seriously. We contain your API keys, and usernames in a secures database where no one can access it. In case of a data leakage we will inform you using Discord or GitHub (if you have a communication method there) if you registered and included in the data leakage. We have logging systems for logins (we store login date, method, and username)

How we share your information

We do not share your personal information with anyone unless required by law. We only share your personal information with law enforcement only if you are in illegal activities that has something to do with Thenamelessdev.com. In the ticktacktoe game your username (both host and player), and room name are available with API to logged in people.
